

Credits & Incentives

In order to attract and retain growing businesses, state and local governments provide valuable economic incentives such as grants, tax credits, abatements and more. When companies expand, make capital investments or add new jobs, McGuire Sponsel guides them through the economic incentives process.

We connect the growth plans of our clients with local and state incentives to reduce costs and add significant dollars to the bottom line. We assist businesses through location decisions, while negotiating the best available incentive packages from state and local governments. Whether a company is opening a new location, relocating or expanding an existing facility, McGuire Sponsel can drive value from investment and growth.

How Can McGuire Sponsel Help?

Credits and incentives from state and local governments can bring significant value to growing businesses. McGuire Sponsel can help identify the best location for a project while maximizing incentive opportunities.

Our team can help:

- Determine key project success drivers
- Evaluate location alternatives
- Maximize state and local incentives such as job creation tax credits, tax abatements, training grants and economic development grants

When Can Businesses Qualify for Incentives?

When a business is considering any of the following in the next year or two they may qualify for incentives:

- Expanding existing facilities or expanding into a new state
- Leasing, buying or building an office, manufacturing space or warehouse
- Creating new jobs
- Purchasing equipment
- Acquiring another business

A conversation with the McGuire Sponsel team will help you pre-qualify and value economic incentives – ensuring that no opportunities are missed.
