How to access the program
Companies must work with their local government (cities/villages/counties). The local unit of government will apply on behalf of the business.

What benefits can a company and/or its employees expect to receive?
Companies can receive grants of up to $25,000 in working capital.
Many cities, towns, and counties - large and small - are marshalling resources for businesses impacted by COVID-19. Local economic development organizations (EDOs) and Chambers of Commerce are key resources for your business in good times and difficult times. We encourage you to reach out to these organizations for programs and opportunities they may be administering or facilitating. Often, local resources may have a fast turnaround time when responding to your needs and providing assistance. Your community may be offering special relief programs similar to these:

Example: Atlanta, Georgia
The Invest Atlanta Business Continuity Loan Fund is a program recently established in partnership with the City of Atlanta and opens up to $1.5 million in funding for zero interest loans to qualifying businesses. Loans are available from $5,000 to $30,000, have no application fee, 0% interest rate, and a 6-12 month deferment on the initial loan payment. Applications are required and certain eligibility criteria must be met before loans are dispersed.

Example: New Castle/Henry County, Indiana
The New Castle Henry County Economic Development Corporation is re-purposing its existing Enterprise Loan Fund in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Companies can receive up to $7,000 in low interest loans with interest-only payments for the first six months. Application fees and closing costs are waived. Firms with up to 30 employees are encouraged to apply and the funds are intended to offset COVID-19 losses, maintain employees, and provide PTO for employees.

Example: Berrien County, Michigan
The Berrien Community Foundation, Southwestern Michigan Tourist Council, and Cornerstone Alliance have partnered to provide specific, short-term relief for local businesses. The program offers zero-interest loans for Berrien County businesses and nonprofit entities that have a rent or mortgage payment due in April and/or May of 2020. Companies and non-profits can receive zero-interest loans of up to $2,000 per month and repayment does not begin for six months.
